Tentative Decision Announced for Pensacola Region Major Maintenance and Repair Competition

PENSACOLA, Fla. – Captain Robert Buchholz, Commanding Officer, Navy Public Works Center (NPWC) Pensacola, announced today that a tentative decision has been made on the Major Maintenance and Repair competition portion of the Commercial Activities Studies for the Pensacola Naval Regional Complex.

The tentative decision is to continue the Major Maintenance and Repair work at NAS Pensacola by government civilian personnel.

The cost comparison between government civilian and contract performance favored government civilian performance by $3 million over a five-year period. The decision to perform the function by government civilian performance is referred to as “tentative” because interested parties will have 30 days to submit an appeal. The final decision will be made after the appeals process is complete.

The Major Maintenance and Repair function currently employs approximately 132 personnel.

Major Maintenance and Repair is a term that refers to medium (large and medium sized) projects that provide maintenance and repair to the wide variety of facilities, structures, roads and grounds, family housing, and utility systems that are aboard Navy installations in the Pensacola region. These projects are typically performed by construction type trades and crafts personnel.
